Overview of NWACC Library's Resources

When you hear the word "library," you probably think "books." However, the NorthWest Arkansas Community College Library has so much more.

From electronic databases, public computers, and quiet study rooms, to one-on-one research assistance and workshops, the NWACC library offers a range of services designed to help you succeed in your classes.

Having trouble finding sources for a research paper? Our knowledgeable staff of librarians is ready to assist you with your research questions in person, online, and over the phone. Bring your assignment sheet with you and we'll show you exactly how to find the information you need.

Our librarians also offer information literacy workshops for visiting classes that teach you how to use the library's resources effectively.

Not only do we have over 45,000 books and videos available for check out, we provide access to a wide range of research databases, containing millions of magazine, newspaper, and journal articles, eBooks, videos, and high-resolution images.

Simply log into My NWACC Connection and click the "Library" tab to access these databases.

Did you forget your textbook and need to complete an assignment before class? Your instructor may place items such as films for class, or copies of your textbook, in the Library's course reserve collection. Ask at the reference desk if you think your class has an item on reserve.

Need a quiet place to study with your classmates? We provide two group study rooms that can be reserved up to a month in advance.

The library also has public computers, black-and-white and color printers, and two copiers available for student use.

The library is located in the main entrance of Burns Hall. Drop by today to start your research, or visit us online at www.nwacc.edu/library
