NWACC Continues to Help Sexual Violence Victims on Campus

Mary Lou Hill
Staff Writer

NorthWest Arkansas Community College provides a safe environment for victims of sexual violence with monthly counseling groups, The Red Flag Campaign and more.

Stephanie Curtis-Henson, director of counseling and wellness, said NWACC regularly collaborates with the Northwest Arkansas Center for Sexual Assault to ensure students can receive the maximum level of support.

"The counseling center provides counseling sessions at no cost to currently enrolled students, to include survivors of sexual assault," Curtis-Henson said.

Although she said students are encouraged to self-report through the Department of Public Safety, the Student Conduct or the Dean of Students office, there are monthly counseling groups held by Candice Kellogg to provide stability for students undergoing any type of sexual violence.

Kellogg visits NWACC on the third Thursday of every month to discuss and provide support for students who choose to participate. The next meeting will be held on Feb. 20 from 1 - 3 p.m. Students may talk to faculty members involved and are always assured that their information will stay confidential.

NWACC also provides personal counseling to anyone who may seek personal counseling services for

According to the Crime Statistics chart in NWACC's 2019 Clery Report, one rape, two accounts of domestic violence, one account of dating violence and one account of stalking were reported between 2016 and 2018 on campus. All other sexual or domestic crimes had no reported incidents.

a myriad of reasons," said Curtis-Henson.

According to the NWACC website, The Red Flag Campaign: See Something. Say Something. is a bystander intervention program designed to connect the NWACC community through education and empowerment.

"We want to create awareness and provide outreach for issues surrounding domestic violence, dating violence, stalking and sexual assault." Curtis-Henson said. "We want to have a community where everyone is encouraged to speak up and speak out against violence and harassment."

NWACC disciplinary proceedings are detailed in the Title IX Policy and Procedures. According to the NWACC website, "the accused (responding party) and the victim (reporting party) will each be allowed to have someone accompany them throughout the investigation and procedures. Both the reporting and the responding parties will be informed of the outcome of the investigation."

According to the NWACC website, if found responsible for sexual assault, possible disciplinary sanctions for the responding party include but aren't limited to: expulsion, suspension, course or program dismissal, conduct probation, disciplinary warning, a conduct review(s) and/or educational conversation with college official(s), mandatory counseling, alcohol and/or drug assessment.

Terry Phillips, in Memoriam

Valued NWACC Professor Passes Away

Jess Pendergrass
Editor-in-Chief

Adjunct faculty member Terry Phillips passed away on Feb. 5 from a heart attack, according to Christine Davis, Dean of Business and Computer Information Systems. Davis informed NorthWest Arkansas Community College staff and faculty of Phillip's passing via email on Feb. 6.

Phillips was an adjunct Business Law instructor at NWACC for 15 years, according to Davis. Phillips taught in both the BLAW division and previously in the Paralegal program. Phillips' classes will continue and be taught by Jennifer Gray, Business Information, Nathan Reggish, Business Information, and new faculty Sarah Heffley, TBA, according to Davis.

Davis said, "Terry will be greatly missed" and that faculty and staff "considered him practically a full-time faculty member."

Phillips served on the Spring

Phillips

Arts and Culture Festival planning committee. He proposed and organized two of this year's events: Title X and sexual harassment as well as the role of media in the presidential election, according to Megan Looney, co-chair of the SACF Planning Committee. Phillips' events are still planned to go forward during SACF.

Looney said Phillips "was an ardent, enthusiastic supporter of the Spring Arts & Culture Festival... and will be greatly missed."

In addition to his contributions in the classroom and to SACF, Phillips served as a member of the Faculty Senate. He was one of the primary authors of the Faculty Senate constitution, according to Carl Collier, English professor.

Phillips was a supporter of student rights, including assisting students who were applying for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, according to Davis. He also hosted panels on legal issues for LGBTQ+ students and Dreamers, according to Davis.

There will not be a funeral service with Phillips, but a memorial service will take place later this spring. More information will be released and anyone who knew Phillips is invited, according to his step-daughter Mary Fennel.

Brightwater Offers Healthy Habits

Thanai Hill
Staff Writer

To start off the new year, Brightwater held a hands-on class, Healthy Habits, the first of the Brightwater Community Outreach and Recreational Education series classes. Healthy Habits was held on Jan. 17, teaching participants recipes and skills on how to stay healthy.

In this class, participants learned healthy food habits, basic knowledge such as knife skills and a new way of cooking.

Participants learned these skills by practicing how to cut objects with knives, extracting juices from certain foods and using certain ingredients in recipes. The participants' skill levels varied from beginners to professionals. Participants attended for various reasons like curiosity for a new way to cook, knowledge on how to cook healthily, and a fresh start to cooking.

Participants made roasted spaghetti squash, winter salad and red curry salmon. The class was led by Erin Szopiak, a certified dietician and nutritionist with 10 years of professional cooking experience.

Szopiak said her motive to be a cook and hold this class was to create healthy, tasty food. Gaynor and Holly Carnes, mother and daughter, said they participated in the class to "learn more about healthy cooking."

Lee Forbs, culinary arts major, assisted in teaching the class. Forbs, who has spent two semesters at Brightwater, said he "always

A Look at Primary Political Issues

Don Olson
Staff Writer

Thomas Jefferson once said, "An educated citizenry is a vital requisite for our survival as a free people." The two major political parties of our country, Democrats and Republicans, are divided on many of the issues facing voters in the upcoming primary elections in March.

The Democratic and Republican parties have different "planks" in their respective platforms. The two major political parties differ on many issues, including: abortion, LGBTQ+ rights, healthcare, separation of church and State, Supreme court nominees, education and military.

Every four years, the Democratic and Republican parties amend their platforms to reflect the political consensus of their respective parties. Statistics from the Family Research Council Action's website show that Democrats will follow 74% of its platform and Republicans will follow 89% of its platform.

The State of the Union address given by President Donald Trump and the response by the Democratic party was a visible contrast of the two major political parties. Differences in party platform and party performance were televised nationwide. The late senator John McCain said, "elections have consequences."

The Democratic Party has given its approval to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. According to the Democratic Party's website, it is "fighting for a better, fairer and brighter future for every American, rolling up our sleeves, empowering grassroots voters, organizing everywhere to take our country back." The Republican Party has emphasized its affirmation of the second amendment to the U.S. Constitution and gave broad support to gun rights and self-defense, according to its party website.

Both the Democratic Party and Republican Party detail their respective positions on their respective websites, Democrats.org and GOP.com. Other political parties including Libertarians, the Green Party and the Constitution Party also have websites promoting their beliefs and concerns.

Primary Elections for Arkansas will be held on March 3. The deadline for voter registration was February 3. Information on Voter Registration can be found at the Voter View website (voterview.ar-nova.org).

More Than a Scholarship Founder Leaves Behind a Strong Legacy

Adam Bubniak
Staff Writer

Ralph Harry Nesson, founder of the Single Parent Scholarship Fund, passed away Jan. 6 because of a biking accident.

In 1984, Nesson founded the Single Parent Scholarship Fund, which in 1990 became the Arkansas Single Parent Scholarship Fund. He helped single parents by offering funding to help further their education.

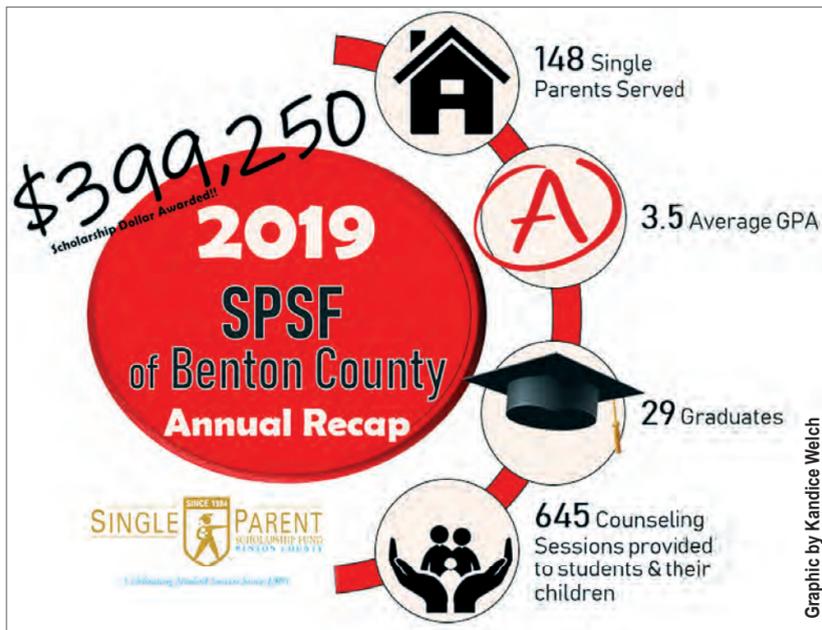

In a tweet from former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, she wrote, "We started the Arkansas Single Parent Scholarship Fund together in 1990, which has awarded 40,000 scholarships to single parents." Clinton wrote about Nesson's passion and how he strove to help the less fortunate. "May his memory be a blessing," she said.

Darlene I, (who would like to keep last name suppressed) a friend of Nesson's, said, "He was a wonderful man that cared so much about families and wanting the single parent to thrive and make the best life for children."

Another friend of Nesson's, Lisa Parks, wrote that "Ralph changed the lives of so many people. Probably every person that he met. Ever." She said she was honored to work with Nesson on the Single Parent Scholarship Fund, according to a Facebook post.

A memorial service for Nesson was held Jan. 8 at Temple Shalom in Fayetteville.

The Single Parent Scholarship ship Fund helps single parents financially so they may obtain a degree. According to its Facebook page, in 2019 the Single Parent Scholarship Fund served 148 recipients and awarded a total of $399,250 scholarship dollars.

The scholarship started as financial aid to those single parents in the low-income range. According to the Single Parent Scholarship Fund of Benton County's website, the scholarship supports single parents with mentoring, personal and career guidelines, community services, self-improvement workshops and a feeling of familial support. The scholarship offers over $1.5 million annually, throughout the state according to the website.

According to the website, the fund also offers help with transportation, childcare, medical expenses, textbook fees, housing, utilities and tuition for post-secondary education.

According to the qualifications set by the fund, recipients have to be a single parent and have at least 50% custody of their child who is 18 years or younger. You must also meet the following definition of "single parent:" 1. marital status-single or divorce final by time scholarship awarded; 2. parenting status-50% physical custody or more, 18 or younger, or +18 must be in high school; 3. living status-only adult in home with children, live with parents and family, or live with roommate non-partner or a co-parent; be a legal resident; have a high school diploma or GED; and not have a bachelor's degree.

In October 2019, Benton County launched the Marjorie Marugg-Wolfe Sustainability Campaign, aiming to raise $3 million in investments to help fund scholarships. The campaign has raised 87% of its goal as of Feb. 17, according to its Facebook page.

During the development stages, the scholarship only provided services to Benton County, but now helps over 75 counties in Arkansas, according to SPSFBC's website.

SPSF partners with NorthWest Arkansas Community College, University of Arkansas, John Brown University, Northwest Technical Institute, Crowder College and Harding University, the website states.

MLK Jr. Presentation is Not Only About MLK Jr.

Arthur Anders

Dr. Angie Maxwell, associate professor of political science at the University of Arkansas, shared about her co-authored book, The Long Southern Strategy, in her Martin Luther King Jr. memorial lecture on Jan. 21.

NorthWest Arkansas Community College political science professor Matt Evans invited Maxwell to present this year, continuing the annual memorial lecture. In

Maxwell's lecture, she talked about the influence of politics in King's movements and campaigns. Maxwell also talked about women's rights, the presidency of Richard Nixon and the campaign of Hubert Humphrey and George Wallace. Following the presentation, Maxwell spoke in an interview on King's fight for his beliefs and how those lessons can help today.

"After the 1964 act, [King] went back out there and kept fighting. King would not stop if his side won or lost, he would find the next thing that we needed to make transparent or create equal opportunities for and then he would fight for that," Maxwell said.

Maxwell spoke to an auditorium of approximately 50 people in the College's Wal-Mart auditorium. Evans said MLK Day is a chance to "reflect on the possibility of politics. We get obsessed with the personal attributes of the King instead of what he was pointing us towards."

"The potential of politics that we can all be engaged in as everyday common people is not through the ability to vote, but what other people call civil resistance," Evans said.

Student Work-Study Opportunities Go Unfilled

Mary Lou Hill
Staff Writer

Several work-study positions open to students are going unfilled.

NorthWest Arkansas Community College offers a federal work-study program benefitting students with a financial need, providing on- and off-campus employment opportunities. According to Director of Financial Aid Moe Abutaleb, "As of November 2019, Benton, Washington and Madison counties have the lowest unemployment rates across the state. With almost everyone working, employers struggle to fill vacant positions."

Work-study positions vary and cover many career tracks. On-campus jobs involve working for a variety of NWACC offices like the Enrollment Center, Testing Center, Tutoring Center and more according to the work-study pages of the NWACC website. Off-campus jobs include a culinary scholarship at NWACC's Brightwater, health professions or an accounting and economics tutor and more. Off-campus jobs will usually be with a private nonprofit organization or public agency.

According to the NWACC

Heather Oropeza, PTA major, and Joeselinne Garcia, business major, wait to assist students as part of their work-study job.

website, the wages for work-study jobs vary although they will meet the federal minimum wage. At NWACC, the minimum federal work-study hourly rate is $10-$10.75 per hour. Wages depend on the type of work, the required skills and the level of need regarding financial aid.

How does getting involved with work-study start? First, students should find a job they're interested in. The list is posted on the NWACC website or students can visit the Career Center in Burns Hall to learn more. Once a student finds a job of their interest, contact the supervisor of the position.

Upon hire, the federal aid office will verify eligibility and the student will be asked to complete a new hire packet and background check. If granted, work study students may work up to 19 hours a week while school is in session.

The work-study qualifications include having a financial need (as demonstrated by FASFA), being a U.S. citizen or eligible non-citizen (permanent resident), being enrolled at NWACC at least half-time (minimum six credit hours), meeting satisfactory academic progress requirements and not being in default on a student loan or owe a grant repayment.

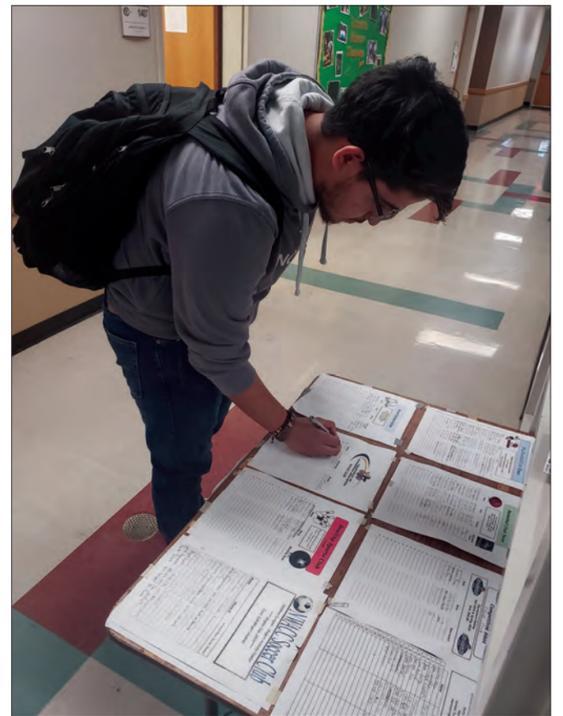

Oona Zachary, pre-health major, works at the Enrollment Center for her work-study. She makes $10 an hour answering students' questions regarding enrollment and transfer questions. She said, "I really wanted to better familiarize myself with the campus, staff and faculty. I also really appreciate the convenience of having a supervisor who is so understanding and accommodating of my busy class schedule." Zachary said.

Some students struggle with managing school and work, but Zachary said she prefers to have the two in one place and so far has "not encountered any obstacles juggling my work, school life balance; however, as my courses pick up, I will need to do a better and more efficient job of managing my time."

Not only are students working where they go to school, but "students earn a pay-check and experience. Most supervisors can work around the student's class schedule and are understanding about student's class and testing schedules," Abutaleb said.

Although there are many perks that come with getting involved with work-study at NWACC, Abutaleb said students should know "money earned from a work-study position does not count as income on the FAFSA. Build connections and network with college faculty and staff. Learn the ins and outs of college."

Get a Kick Out of Club Sports Men's Competitive Soccer Sign-Ups Now Open

Shonna Enizo
Staff Writer

Soccer season is almost here and NorthWest Arkansas Community College's Club Sports are looking for a few good men to play soccer.

John Luedtke, director of Health, Physical Education, Fitness Center and Club Sports, said he is recruiting "talented, experienced" soccer players for the Rogers Activity Center Spring League. The NWACC team has a winning history, with six championship wins to its credit.

Luedtke said the league is competitive, but NWACC offers teams in the silver and bronze league so there are options for players with varying experience. However, he said all the leagues are competitive.

"Soccer can be a pretty aggressive sport," Luedtke said. "If you don't go out there with any formal structure or organization it's hard.... We try to find people who play competitive soccer," he said.

Despite the competitiveness, Luedtke said there are no tryouts for the league. Currently, no sports at NWACC require a tryout to join. According to its website, NWACC prides itself on creating an atmosphere of inclusion, and further demonstrates this commitment in its online presence that states, "There is a place for everyone here."

Matches start on April 6 and run through June 5, with most practices and games occurring on Saturday or Sunday. The players are responsible for their own transportation and a registration fee of $35 which covers uniforms and required insurance.

NWACC covers the cost of the team registration fee of $520. All games are held at the Rogers Activity Center on 315 W. Olive St. or Veterans Park at 500 E. Veterans Parkway, Rogers.

Todd Kitchen, vice president of Student Services, was also given as a point of contact by Luedtke. Eagle View contacted Kitchen to clarify recruitment procedures. He confirmed that Luedtke was the point of contact for Club Sports, but offered no other information.

Fliers for the sport say there are spots for 18 - 20 players as well as a team captain. Being team captain, "teaches life skills," Luedtke said. According to research conducted by British Universities and College Sports, graduates who have participated in sports while at university earn, on average, 18% more than their non-sport play counterparts.

BUCS says, "Teamwork, leadership skills, and time management," are skills that employers are searching for that can be earned in club sports. Taking on the leadership role of team captain can be a resume skill for a student.

The sign-up sheets are Burns Hall, outside of office 1417 and 1418, or contact John Luedtke at jluedtke@nwacc.edu, (479) 619-4138, or stop by his office from 10 a.m. - 12 p.m., Monday- Friday, in BH1432.

Education featured at State of the Union Political parties disagreed on matters concerning schools

Jewell Parnell
Managing Editor

During the Feb. 4 State of the Union address, President Donald J. Trump spoke on the importance of childhood education, the failings of government-funded schools and called for the government to pass education freedom scholarships.

Trump said the next step to building an inclusive society in America is the assurance that every child gets a “great education” and “the opportunity to achieve the American dream.” The problem, Trump said, “is for too long children have been trapped in failing government schools.” To rescue students, Trump said 18 states have initiated school choice in the form of opportunity scholarships to private schools, which he said are so popular “tens of thousands” of students are on a waiting list.

Trump called on Congress during the SOTU to award one million children opportunity scholarships by passing the Education Freedom Scholarships and Opportunity Act because “no parent should be forced to send their child to a failing government school,” he said. The act not only goes toward tuition to private schools but also dual-enrollment, out-of-district transportation, tutoring and apprenticeships, according to Whitehouse.gov.

In the Democratic response to the SOTU address, Gov. Gretchen Whitmer (D - Michigan) said, “Instead of talking about what he is saying, I’m going to highlight what Democrats are doing.” Whitmer did not have a direct rebuttal to Trump’s education statements.

Examples of the changes Democrats have been doing across the country in the past year, Whitmer said, include: Gov. Tony Evers (D - Wisconsin) increased spending on education in his state by $65 million; Colorado Gov. Jared Polis signed a bill to expand state-wide all-day kindergarten classes.

— Donald Trump

In the Education Freedom Scholarships Fact Sheet archive from Sep. 26, 2019, it was reported 14,000 students in Florida are being admitted to private schools on scholarship after Gov. Ron DeSantis (R - Florida) approved Senate Bill 7070 - Empowerment Scholarship Program. The bill provides a cap of 18,000 low-income students a tax-credit scholarship for private schooling, according to the Florida Department of Education.

In opposition, according to the EFS Fact Sheet, 50,000 students remain on waitlists after Gov. Tom Wolf (D - Pennsylvania) vetoed a scholarship program expansion, House Bill 800. Trump referenced this veto in his SOTU speech when he awarded Janiyah Davis, a fourth-grade child of a single mother from Philadelphia, an opportunity scholarship to attend the private school of her choice.

In a written response located on Wolf’s official government website on June 18, 2019, Wolf said his decision to veto HB 800 was because money shouldn’t be put toward private schools when public schools are already underfunded. “We have public schools that are structurally deteriorating, contaminated by lead and staffed by teachers who are not appropriately paid and overstretched in their responsibilities. Tackling these challenges, and others, should be our collective priority,” he said.

Wolf also said “little is known” about the scholarship organizations that retain up to 20% of each dollar granted and are subsidized heavily by taxpayers. The bill also seeks to increase the maximum threshold of annual income qualification to $95,000, “further deserting the program’s original core principal,” he said.

February 2019, House Rep-

representative Bradley Byrne (R - Alabama) introduced H.R. 1434 - Education Freedom Scholarships and Opportunity Act. The bill would amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to “encourage individual and corporate taxpayers to contribute to scholarships for elementary and secondary students through eligible scholarship-granting organizations,” according to Congress.gov.

The bill would create a $5 billion annual tax credit, according to Whitehouse.gov, for donations to aid scholarships. Tax-credit scholarships, according to Educational Choice’s website, are a partial or full tax-credit received when donating to nonprofits that sponsor private-school scholarships.

The EFSOA was referred to House Ways and Means and House Education and Labor committees on the day of introduction, Feb. 28, 2019. No further action has been taken on the bill, according to Congress.gov.

According to the U.S. Department of Education Fiscal Year 2020 Budget Summary, Trump requested a Budget Authority of $64 billion, a $7.1

billion (10%) reduction from the 2019 appropriation. Cancellation of $2 billion worth of unobligated Pell Grants were also requested.

The Budget Summary explained the reduction as a way to “implement fundamental reforms aimed at reducing the size and scope of the Federal role in education, while empowering states, communities, and parents to improve the performance of our schools and postsecondary institutions.” The requests would reduce taxpayer costs by $6.7 billion.

Under major initiatives for the 2020 fiscal year, the “Increase Access to School Choice” section said Trump requested a $500 million budget for Charter Schools Program, an increase of $60 million from 2019. The money would, “support State and local efforts to establish new charter schools, replicate and expand existing high-performing charter schools and help charter schools access to high-quality facilities.”

The requests under the school choice initiative also include a $107 million budget for the Magnet Schools Program, a $50 million budget for Student-Centered Funding Initiative Grants and raising the Direct Student Services set-aside in Title I.

Trump asked Congress during the SOTU to back a plan that, if put in effect, would offer vocational and technical education in “every single high school” in the country.

Ed Calianese provides Storm Spotter Training to participants on Feb. 11 at the Washington County Sheriff’s Office.

Training Takes NWACC by Storm

Arthur Anders
Staff Writer

An annual storm spotter training class hosted by the National Weather Service from Tulsa, Oklahoma is set for 7 p.m. on March 11, 2020 in the Walmart Auditorium in the Shewmaker Center for Workforce Development at NorthWest Arkansas Community College.

Ed Calianese, a warning coordination meteorologist from the National Weather Service in Tulsa, is coming to NWACC to speak about types of weather. Covering weather topics spanning from tornadoes to supercells, one is sure to find a weather subject worth discovering more about.

Calianese will also discuss the types of warnings and more weather information. At the end of the training class, participants will receive a trained storm spotter certificate. For more information go to www.weather.gov/tsa/spotter\_training.

SACF SPRING ARTS & CULTURE FESTIVAL

NorthWest Arkansas Community College will host the Spring Arts and Culture Festival from March 2 - 5.

According to the SACF page on NWACC's website, SACF brings together artists, academics, intellectuals and members of the community for a "multi-day, interdisciplinary festival." The theme this year is 20/20 vision and SACF said it hopes to examine perspective and ask whether we have a clear understanding of ourselves, according to the website.

All events are free and open to the public. All schedule information provided by the NWACC website.

 1917, winner of three Oscars, stars two boys, featured on the poster, on a desperate mission.

Sam Mendes war film and winner of three Oscars at this year's awards, "1917" tells the tragic story of two British soldiers during World War I.

As I am partial to war stories, I went in with high expectations. I prefer a war story that reveals the truth of war: there is no victory. "1917" displayed the loss and destruction of war with stinging clarity and cinematic majesty.

Mendes puts the viewer in a world surrounded by the truth of the story he tells. I got lost in the film and was yanked through the tumult of death that inherently comes with war. The visuals were surreal while, simultaneously, being all too real. Every burst of flame or loud gunshot was visceral, echoing under my skin. I cowered back in my seat when violence made its way toward the front of the screen. There was no escaping this film.

Lance Corporal Schofield, played by George MacKay, serves as a symbol for redemption that is unattainable in war. The misfortune that befalls him endears him to us and yet we understand that he is unsavable. Living through betrayal and the loss of a friend to the harsh whims of war change him into a man before our eyes. There is a stubbornness that propels him through his journey which I held on to for his sake, begging him to make it.

Though Schofield does eventually achieve his goal, perhaps too little too late, there is still a sour note to his win. Colonel Mackenzie, played by Benedict Cumberbatch, tells the real truth of the film. That day the order was to stand down, saving thousands of lives; tomorrow the order will change and men will keep dying. The war will not end until it is the last man standing, he says. The purpose of this film is to remind us, with gruesome honesty, the reality of war.
